WIVES BEHIND THE COUNTER

Thousands of wives and home-tied women will soon be doing part time work as shop assistants to relieve girls for war work. One store in Birmingham has already freed 200 girls in this way, offering women between 35 to 60 any one of three categories: afternoons only, Thursdays and Saturdays only, or five full days a week. To those who cannot even spare these hours from their household and family work, it is requested that they report at the stores what time they can give. Some of the stores are taking back ex-employees who have married and brought up families. Apart from a desire to help the war effort, many of these are pleased to be back at their jobs. Sometimes two women in one household take alternate shifts.

The eighth annual convention of the Alberta Bedkeepers' Association will be held in the Empress hotel, Calgary, on October 15 and 16. Anyone interested in bees cordially invited to attend.

Don't fail to speak, if only a word, on entering a room in which there is a blind person. It announces your presence and helps identification. Say who you are, if a stranger. Always shake hands when meeting or leaving a blind friend, for a handshake is as expressive as the face, and is the substitute for the smile of friendship.

LOCAL RED CROSS NOTES

The Blaimore branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society forwarded its twenty-sixth shipment to the Calgary headquarters last week end. Two lists were included, the first being the regular work of the ladies of the branch, and included three pairs of two-way mitts, 74 army scarves, 25 pairs socks, 2 navy scarves, one turtle-neck sweater, four pullover sweaters, two steel helmet cap protectors, 11 hospital gowns, 211 pillow cases, 12 suits pyjamas, 72 sheets and 244 towels.

The second list comprised articles made by the young ladies' sewing group of Blaimore, and included ten 2-year-old coats, seven 2-year-old sweaters, six 12-year-old girls' knitted outfits, one 14-year-old boy's sweater, one 8-year-old boy's sweater, one 8-year-old girl's knitted dress, two girls' sweaters, one girl's skirt, two baby outfits, 8 pairs children's socks, 3 pairs children's mitts, one toque, three baby booties, two 2-year-old knitted dresses, one baby quilt, 24 suits men's pyjamas, 10 suits 2-year-old pyjamas and five large quilts. This second list was forwarded to headquarters for distribution among the people in the bombed-out areas in Britain.

Blaimore is on the map in Red Cross work, as for its size it is doing as much, and perhaps more than any other town in Alberta, and congratulatory letters continue to be received from headquarters for the fine work being done here, both for quantity and quality of the work.

DECISIVE NEW WAGE CONTROL BEING POLISHED BY OTTAWA

New and far-reaching wartime wages policy will shortly be announced from Ottawa. Under the proposed plan, a Wartime Wages Control Board will be set up with complete authority over all wages in both war and non-war industry.

The board will parallel the present organization for the control of all commodity prices under the chairmanship of Hector B. McKinnon.

The Prices Board has the widest possible powers for control of all commodity prices. It reports to cabinet through Hon. J. L. Hiley, minister of finance. The new Wages Board will report to cabinet through the minister of labor.

The Board will have control over wage areas now considered provincial jurisdiction, and will be the ultimate authority for every wage agreement, whether arranged through existing provincial bureaus or directly by federal departments. Regional boards with authority to adjudicate employer-employee relations will be set up throughout the country.

Joe Petronoff was winner of the "biggest leaver" prize offered by The Enterprise a few months ago. He stood for twenty minutes listening to a chronic knocker on a Blaimore street corner. He willingly paid for the advertisement.

APPRECIATES THE HOME PAPER E. A. GALE PASSES AT COLEMAN

Camrose, Alta., 7th Oct., 1941. To the Publisher, The Enterprise, Blaimore, Alberta.

Dear Sir: On behalf of the Commanding Officer, Lt.-Col. Scott, D.C. M., and staff, the Library Committee, and the soldiers in training at this centre, I wish to express thanks for the complimentary subscription which you are providing. Some of the papers have been coming over since the camp opened a year ago; others added their copies when the area covered by our basic training scheme was enlarged.

We have a list that includes nearly all the weeklies and dailies in Alberta, and dailies from Regina and Saskatoon. May I say that every paper on our racks is read and enjoyed, week after week, by our personnel. These boys have travelled around Alberta and often eagerly look for the paper of the town where last employed, as well as their home town paper. Our library has been well supported, and now has over 1,200 volumes on the shelves—a very good selection of diversified reading, with some reference volumes.

This week special anniversary celebrations are being arranged; the camp opened one year ago. Friday next, October 10th, will see a ceremonial march past of the Training Centre through Camrose in the morning and a special sports program in the afternoon, when the camp will be open to visitors, and refreshments will be provided. You will be given a cordial welcome in camp or at the Library Hut on Friday, and we hope to meet some of the editors, whose co-operation has been so much appreciated.

Sincerely,
N. W. WHITMORE,
H. Capt. and Chaplain, The Library.

Mr. and Mrs. Perrin Baker, of Etzikom, will leave shortly to take up residence in Vancouver.

Mr. K. H. Newinger, district representative of the Canadian Pacific Express Company, was a visitor to Blaimore on Wednesday and called on The Enterprise.

Speaking to the Trades and Labor convention in Calgary, Premier Aberhart issued a warning. "Half of what you hear today is untrue, so do not let it worry you." He was no doubt, thinking at the time of his preachings and premises.

If the name of The Blaimore Enterprise were changed to The Blaimore Telegram, you could send a Telegram message of 400,000 words a week to a friend for less than five cents. It's the cheapest form of complete message on earth, and yet the best.

Ernest Albert Gale, aged 64, passed away rather suddenly at the Coleman hospital on Sunday evening. Born at Lammington, England, he came to Alberta about forty years ago. For some years past he has been engineer at the East Kootenay Power Company's auxiliary plant at Sentinel.

He is survived by two sons, Albert, of Blaimore, and Thomas, of Kamloops; and one daughter, at Coleman, who has been operating the White Lunch Cafe. There are other surviving relatives in England.

Funeral service was held in Blaimore on Thursday afternoon, and interment took place in the Blaimore cemetery.

HILLCREST HAPPENINGS

A whist and bridge drive was held by the ladies of St. Theresa's Society in the Catholic hall on Friday night last. Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. T. Beck and Mr. D. Grant; the whist prizes by Mrs. J. Dudley and Emelia Siga. Later in the evening a dainty luncheon was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Ulrich and son, Flight Sgt. Charlie Ulrich, motored to Trail on Thursday last, where they visited John, who is employed there.

The ladies of the United church held a successful banquet in the gym on Wednesday evening of last week.

A pantry shower in honor of Mrs. H. Monti was held in the Catholic hall on Monday night.

John Douglas, of the R.C.A.F., stationed at Brandon, is home on leave.

Forty potatoes were taken from one hill in a garden near Drumheller. And they weighed nineteen pounds.

The proposed scheme of grading potatoes should provide a lot more soft jobs for heelers who would never use a hoe.

A covey of twelve Hungarian partridge alighted on Blaimore's main street on Sunday forenoon. Must have been migrating to B.C.

There was one lady at Sunday afternoon's B.E.S.L. meeting in the Sarcophagi hall. She made several motions but failed to get seconds.

To the end of August well over one thousand British sailors had spent shore leave at the rest camp maintained by Scouts at an Atlantic seaport.

Bird game conservationists are said to be adhering to that worthy bit of doggerel verse, which runs:

"He who hunts and kills not all
May hope to hunt again next fall;
But he who kills all that he can
Is neither sport nor gentleman."

COWLEY HAPPENINGS

World Communion was observed in the United church here, on Sunday, when Rev. W. H. Irwin, of Bellevue, took charge of the service. Miss Margaret Richards, of Hillcrest, acted as pianist.

A number of members of the local lodge attended the Masonic district meeting in Pincher Creek on Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Mrs. Fred Tustian entertained the local branch of the Red Cross at her home on Saturday afternoon. Arrangements were made to hold whist drives every two weeks throughout the winter months to raise funds.

Mr. Dobson is relieving C. J. Bundy at the C.P.R. depot. Mr. and Mrs. Bundy are holidaying in Nova Scotia.

Farmers are taking advantage of a few fine days this week and are working overtime trying to get their threshing finished. Winter vegetables are being harvested and stored.

J. R. Nutter, of the Cowley airport, has been transferred to Regina, where he is employed with the traffic control tower. The vacancy here has been filled by Mr. Davidson, who has moved his family here.

Lloyd Morrison has gone to Edmonton, where he is attending the third year at the University of Alberta.

The first of a series of whist drives in aid of the Red Cross was held in the Masonic hall on Wednesday night. In spite of bad roads and a busy season, a goodly number turned out. Prizes were won by Mrs. Stanley Snyder, ladies' first; Mrs. Jim Alexander, consolation; Frank Webber, gent's first; H. C. Morrison, consolation.

Carry your registration certificate.

Bobbie Powers missed $30 by not attending a show in Clarendon on Wednesday night of last week.

Bob Lavett, president of District 18 of the U. M. W. of A., was a visitor to The Pass over the week end.

"Now, you're tellin' me! This world is goin' to end some day, or I'll punch you d— quick!" Boys, get ready.

Maurice Dupuis, leader of the opposition Union Nationale party, is opposed to jobless insurance. No doubt many will be prepared to take advantage of the scheme who are in no way entitled to assistance therefrom.

CZECHOSLOVAK MISSION TO VISIT THE PASS

A meeting of the Czechoslovak National Alliance of the Crown's Nest Pass was held at Coleman on Sunday to make plans for the reception of the Czechoslovak Military Mission, which is at present touring the Dominion.

The Mission, with headquarters at Toronto, will arrive in Blaimore at noon on Sunday for the purpose of recruiting men of Czechoslovak birth in the Crown's Nest Pass for service overseas. A mass meeting will be held in the Colubus hall at 2.30 p.m.

The personnel of the mission, each of whom will address the meeting, includes Senator V. Benes, brother of Dr. E. Benes, president of the Czechoslovakian government in exile in London; Colonel C. Hutnik, high commander of the Czechoslovakian army in England; Lt.-Colonel J. Amburs, commander of the Czechoslovakian air force in England; and Consul K. Busch, secretary of the National Alliance in Canada.

Subjects to be dealt with include: Czechoslovakian Legend in England and its organization, general situation of the Czechoslovakian people throughout the world, prevailing conditions in Czechoslovakia under the Nazis, and to encourage the Czechoslovakian youth in the Dominion to enlist in the army.

Representing the local district alliance, the following committee will receive the visitors: John Danco and M. Margetaki, Blaimore; F. Gurtel, Bellevue; T. Pomacha, Frank; and A. Kalivoda, Coleman, who hope that all Czechoslovakian people residing in The Pass will attend this meeting.

Following the meeting here, the Mission will proceed to Michel, B.C.

Has anyone heard Aberhart express a word of sympathy for Alberta farmers?

Miss Helen Tompkins, R.N., of Nelson, spent several days with her parents here.

Some people apply to the government for a change of name. Others just get married.

Birthday congratulations are this week extended to Edna Swanson, Oct. 4; Mrs. F. Chardon, Oct. 5; Catherine Patterson, Oct. 6; Bruce Pinkney, Oct. 7, and Rose Oliver, Oct. 8.

BREAD is Dominion's
Best and Cheapest Source of Energy

CANADIANS are fortunate that bread—so easy and economical to buy—plays such a large part in keeping them well, strong and energetic.

Bread—the wholesome, nourishing loaf made by your baker—supplies one-quarter of the food energy of the Dominion.

Bread supplies valuable carbohydrates. Bread releases its energy quickly, supplies it for hours. And, with its modern milk content, bread supplies important protein for the building and repair of muscular energy.

Keep vital... fit for life's emergencies—eat more bread.

Had Spectacular Reign

Former Shah of Iran Was Vigorous Man of Action

Reza Shah Pahlavi is no longer Shah-in-Shah of Iran, having abdicated in favor of his 10-year-old son, Mohammed Reza Pahlavi. Thus, says the Hamilton Spectator, comes to an end a spectacular reign of 16 years, worthy to take its place in the annals of the Arabian Nights. The career of Reza Shah and his rise to supreme power, is indeed, well-nigh incredible. It is said he owes his good fortune to Lord Ironside, who picked out the tall Persian officer, who had given good evidence of his courage and enterprise, to take command during the anti-Bolshevik operations following the last Great War. Colonel Reza Khan, as he then was, lost no time in improving the occasion, riding into Teheran with his Cossacks, in 1921, and setting himself up as the new ruler of Persia.

That this vigorous man of action was a great improvement over the weak, pleasure-loving, voluptuary Ahmed, his predecessor, who spent so much of his time in the French Riviera, is undoubted. The reforms Reza Khan effected in Persia, which he renamed Iran, were many and real. Conditions were so deplorable that there was practically unlimited scope for the exercise of his energy and zeal. But in bringing about the changes much hardship and injustice is said to have been inflicted on officials and people alike.

Complete Literature

Given To World By Ancient Greece, Modern France And England

There are few nations who have during their whole existence really thought and read. Among the Ancients the Latin literature is worth nothing at the outset, then it borrowed and became imitative. Among the moderns, German literature does not exist for nearly two centuries (1550-1750). Italian literature and Spanish literature end at the middle of the seventeenth century. Only ancient Greece, Modern France and England offer a grand and complete literature.

HOME SERVICE

LETTER MAY DECIDE FATE OF YOUR ROMANCE OR JOB

Her Note Needs A Few Tips

How quickly you can kill a summer romance with a boring letter! And yet good letters are as easy to write as bad ones.

Easier! For it's hard, dull work to grind out "Dear Bill, How are you? I am writing to say—" But it's a cinch to scrawl your gay, natural greeting, "Hi, Bill!"

And why waste words "writing to say?" Just SAY! At once Bill recognizes the real, the attractive you he knows. He loves your characteristic description of the jolty that "wants to die but nobody'll let it," the "glorious purple sunset at Clear Lake."

It's the same in business letters. You don't hem and haw, "In reply to your letter—" You write directly: "The salary you mentioned will be satisfactory."

That positive note is important in closing, too. Not "Regretting the delay, we are—" but "We will see that such a delay does not occur again. Sincerely yours."

Our 32-page booklet tells how to make your letters vivid and correct. Has samples of 24 letters, formal, friendly, business. Helps improve your grammar, suggests topics to write about.

NEW LONG-WAISTED HOME-FROCK
By Anne Adams

Of course you want to look young and well-groomed, even at household tasks! Your answer is Pattern 4777 by Anne Adams. It's so simple to make with the accompanying illustrated Sewing Instructor! That frustration in a time-saver for dressing and for laundering. Notice how the side-sections of the bodice, front and back, are bias-cut for nice fit and to give you a slim long-waisted look. Notice, too, how the skirt flares gracefully below the hips! Towel long, panelled lines will give you height. As you can see in the small view, you may have long sleeves in, instead of short. Get this useful pattern today and make it up in a cotton shantung or some other sturdy cotton.

Pattern 4777 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 4½ yards 35 inch fabric.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

OCTOBER 12

CHRIST OUR SAVIOR

Golden text: For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have eternal life. John 3:16.
Lesson: Matthew 1:21; 20:25-28; Luke 19:1-10; John 3:16; 6:68-69; Acts 1:12; Romans 3:21-26; 8:31-39; II. Corinthians 5:14-21; Philippians 2:5-11; I. Timothy 1:15.
Devotional reading: Isaiah 53:1-6.

Explanations and Comments

The Savior Came to Give His Life a Ransom for Many, Matthew 20:28. Read the earlier verses of this chapter. Calling the disciples to him, Jesus reminded them that the rulers of this world played the tyrant over them, their great ones exercised authority over them. That is the worldly idea of greatness—power to exercise authority, high position which can demand service, enforce obedience, and give his life a ransom for many.

Not so shall it be among you, Jesus continued; among you the measure of power is service; you are measured, not by the way they lord it over others, but by the way they serve others. Greatest among you is the one who is most useful to his fellow men. Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. This is the first mention of Christ's death as an atoning sacrifice.

Christ Came to Seek and Save the Lost, Luke 19:1-10. Zacchaeus was a publican, a Jew who played the tax collector, who was rich, doubtless with ill-gotten gains.

When Jesus was about to pass through Jericho on his way up to Jerusalem, Zacchaeus realized that the shortness of stature would prevent his seeing him over the heads of the crowd which was gathering. Being determined and resourceful, he ran ahead of the crowd and climbed a sycamore tree that was standing by the side of the road where Jesus must pass. The tree was easily climbed, for it had a short trunk and wide-spreading branches. The sycamore of Palestine is not like the sycamore of England; it has been described as a fig-mulberry because its fruit resembles the fig in appearance, and its leaves those of the mulberry.

When Jesus reached the tree he looked up and calling Zacchaeus by name, bade him hasten down, for "I must abide at thy house," he added. No Jewish rabbi would have offered to stay at a publican's house, but Jesus' must was that of a shepherd who would care for his lost sheep. Zacchaeus dropped down from his perch and came to Jesus, while the people murmured saying, "He is gone to lodge with a man that is a sinner." "Publicans and sinners" was a phrase in common use.

"When Jesus declared that he had come to lay down his life a ransom for many, and in order that every one might understand in what sense he redeemed men from their sins, took the salvation of Zacchaeus as an illustration, one understands the statement." (John Watson).

An Incident in History

Nazi Freedom Do Not Mean That

Douglas Miller, the Atlantic Monthly says: Germany can be beaten, it is treason inside the country to say so, but every German thinks about it, worries about it, and is preparing himself psychologically to accept it. Germany will be beaten. The long story of humanity's rise toward a tolerable and free existence for the average man will not come to an end because of the insane delusions of a single individual or the wounded inferiority complex of a single people. German military successes in the last two years are based upon a superior mechanized army, organized and equipped while the Democracies slept. This is merely an incident in history. It is not the end of Christian civilization, or of human decency, or of freedom.

Should Be Permanent

One of our oldest and most time-honored customs, that of throwing rice and confetti on newly-married couples is being abolished by law in Britain. The shortage of foods and feeds, and of paper stocks, has forced the move. It is one war regulation which should not be hard to obey.

French Lads Loyal

Braved Dangers Of Channel To Join Forces In Britain

The New York Times says: No one in whom the spirit of adventure lives can fail to be stirred by the story of the five French lads, none of them more than 19 years old, who braved the dangers of the English Channel in two small canoes to join the Free French forces in Britain. For two nights and a day they battled the tides, and those who know the choppy sea of that waterside will appreciate what that means. In daytime they dared not hoist their tiny sails for fear of being seen from German patrol planes, but padded stoutly on. Near land one craft struck a rock and sank, but the three boys in it swam safely to shore. In these five youths who have the true spirit of France. Two centuries ago it carried the indomitable Champlain by lake and river into the heart of the Canadian wilderness and gave the French an overseas empire. In the last war it drove back the Germans from the Marne and held them at Verdun. That spirit is not dead. It is only numbed by great misfortune and held captive by the might of foreign arms and the treachery of self-seeking politicians.

Time Signals

International Service Still Functioning During War

Aloof from war is an international service — time signals — affecting very home and office and equally important to learned scientist and untutored laborer.

Dominion observatory officials said daily international wireless time signals—one of them from Germany—are still being picked from the air to provide a scientific check on the clocks of Canada.

The signals are in conformity with international agreement and reports on their use are made to co-operating observatories. Ottawa receives daily time signals from Arlington, N.Y.; Bordeaux, France; Mons, France; Nauen, Germany; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and Rugby, England.

Canadian Red Cross Sends 15,000 Parcels Weekly To Europe

F. W. Routley, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross, Toronto, said his organization is sending 15,000 parcels a week to continental Europe for prisoners in enemy occupied territory. The parcels, he said, cost $1.90 apiece to put up and transportation expenses are $2.50 each. They contain a week's supply of food, giving 2,300 calories a day.

DAUGHTER OF DESTINY

—BY—
Eleanor Atterbury Colton

CHAPTER XXVII.

For an instant that stretched time into infinity, Devona and Talbot faced each other across that handsome room. A clock ticked sonorously somewhere. Devona realized. And a muffled thudding that must be of her own heart pounded like distant kettle drums.

She waited, scarcely breathing, searching for the right word, the right gesture.

"Well?" Talbot finally broke the spell himself with a quirkness that she had, a few moments ago, mistaken for calm reasonableness. "Why did you come back? This isn't going to be pretty."

Devona nodded dry lips, tried to match that false calm with real control. "I had to come back."

"No you didn't. And you'd better run along now. Surely a man has a right to—his lips twisted—"his own decisions."

"No, not in this decision," she took a step toward him, flinched as she saw his fingers tighten around the gun's handle. "Not when it involves others."

"Fortunately, this decision doesn't involve any one but myself. Except," he added dryly, "as it relieves them of responsibilities."

"But it does, Tal. It involves all of us."

"All of whom?"

"Every one who loves you."

He shrugged. "Dale, maybe. But I'm a drag around his neck. He'll be better off. Otherwise, there's no one."

"Yes, there is. We all love you—I do, Tal. That reached him—almost. Instinctively she knew she'd touched him finally. "You mustn't do this—to me."

The trust fingers on the gun but relaxed a little. "Do you mean that, Devona?"

"But—of course, Tal. It was worth it, that little lie, she assured herself watching him drop the gun slowly onto the desk. Besides, it wasn't exactly a lie. She did love him—for himself, for the traits he shared with his brother, for his need of her. Not the way she loved, had loved—Dale. Still—

"Devona—you mean—" Tal's grim face relaxed, almost imperceptibly at first, changed from despair to heart-breaking hopefulness.

Mute now with relief, Devona nodded, held out her arms to him. In the next moment he'd crossed the room to her, gathered her convulsively into his arms.

"Oh, my darling. Oh, my God, Devona. You don't know what this means Devona. I love you, my sweet. I wanted you. I need you, my sweet."

The door, which had stood open since that terrible moment that Devona had flung it wide, closed softly now. The sound of its latch jerked at their attention.

"Still holding her close, Tal spoke over her shoulder.

"Hello, Dale."

For an instant Devona stared straight ahead at Tal's sad lips. An instant in which she tried to discipline the expression on her face, regiment the routed emotions fleeing now like some ragged army through her mind. When she turned, she met the strange smile on Dale's lips, heard a note of—could it be hatred—in his voice.

"Surprised! I don't wonder! But you see—it's this way. What the depression didn't do to us, this little plunge into backing Tal's play, finished up. We're broke, my dear little future sister-in-law. So—let you be letting yourself for some time—"

"Fury swept a crimson flood-tide into her cheeks as Devona took a step toward him, her slim fists clenched, her words coming low and even as she lashed out at him.

"You're despicable. You're attributing to me, and to Tal, your own contemptible motives. I've Tal. I'll marry him for that reason—and for no other."

"Good!" Dale applauded dryly, leaned one elbow against the fireplace mantel with magnificent carelessness. "And let's hope you really mean that. Tal couldn't stand another blow, I suppose you realize. Or—would anything like that really concern you?"

She clutched a chair back to keep her hands from flying to his smiling sarcastic face. "I realize it perfectly. I shan't let him down."

"Again—good." His eyes traveled slowly from her face, down the length of her soft velvet gown, to

"Well—sounds as if congratulations were in order, Tal."

"I'll say!" Tal's face was a study in proud delight. "And what's the idea of busting in on a guy when he's right in the midst of his proposing?"

Dale managed a grin. "Sorry, old man. I had no idea you were up to that."

"Neither did I—until just now." Tal hugged her close, smiled down at her. "May I present the future Mrs. Brasher," he said, then laughing, he amended, "The future Mrs. Talbot Brasher, I should say."

Unflinching, Devona met Dale's glance as it travelled from Tal's jubilant face to her own trembling smile.

"Congratulations, Tal," Dale said, but he looked at her. "And my very best wishes for your happiness."

But Dale's eyes were bafflingly masked. He only smiled carelessly at Tal burst out of the room shouting, "Abbot! Hey, there, Abbot! Open that champagne. Both bottles. We're celebrating Abbot! Where the devil is he?"

As Tal's steps thundered down the hall, Devona and Dale faced each other across a widening chasm of silence. Finally Dale bridged it with a sarcastic:

"So it's to be—Mrs. Talbot Brasher."

Obviously he hadn't seen—he didn't understand! She wanted to sink into that chasm and pull it over her head. "Yes," she managed quietly. "Talbot needs me."

Perhaps it was better this way. For Tal's sake, Dale had better not know about—the gun.

"And I presume—" Dale bowed a little, "you need him too."

"Of course." Quick loyalty to Tal, to her own promise to him, prompted her as, head high, she met Dale's challenge levelly. "I love him," she added quietly.

"I see. Let it rather—sudden!" She flushed, her eyes lowered, defeated for the moment before the savage assault of Dale's sarcasm.

"I—I—" she stammered helplessly, but her lips as words refused to come.

"I didn't know you had ambitions in his direction."

That stung her pride out of its muteness. "What do you mean?"

"I mean that for an ambitious little girl like yourself, it's rather assumed marriage would have to have a handsome price tag attached. And—" His smile was like a smart slap in the face, "if you didn't know, you should be told now that the Brasher fortune is practically non-existent."

"Surprised! I don't wonder! But you see—it's this way. What the depression didn't do to us, this little plunge into backing Tal's play, finished up. We're broke, my dear little future sister-in-law. So—let you be letting yourself for some time—"

She clutched a chair back to keep her hands from flying to his smiling sarcastic face. "I realize it perfectly. I shan't let him down."

"Again—good." His eyes traveled slowly from her face, down the length of her soft velvet gown, to the points of her pretty slippers, and then back. "At that, it will be one way to advance your—career, won't it?"

So that's what he thought. Just cheap opportunism! Devona's rage turned to dust in her throat. Dismissing her way to protect Tal from what he probably believed was unscrupulous selfishness. How could she make him see that?

"Please believe me Dale. It's not my career—it's Tal's I'll work for now. You're so wrong about that."

"We shall see." Dale shrugged and then as Tal's footsteps sounded again in the hall outside, he turned to her, his face grim, his voice lowered.

"If you do let him down, if you add one note to the agony he's just been through, by all the gods, Devona Brasher, I'll kill you. He's the only brother I've got and I happen to care more about what happens to him than anything else. Understand that? Or can you?"

Mute, she nodded, fought back tears.

"If you don't mean it when you say you love him—" Dale's eyes blazed—"then I'm warning you to clear out while there's yet time."

But Tal's hilarious return spared her an answer. Carrying a tray of thin-stemmed glasses and champagne in a silver ice bucket, he kicked open the door, strode triumphantly into the room.

"You play bartender, Dale," he commanded and, turning, swept Devona into his arms again. "What do you think of my bride-to-be, old man? Isn't she?" His eyes devoured her "gorgeous!"

"Very," Dale agreed dryly, picked up the silver handed bottle opener.

"And to think I found out she loved me on just the night I needed to know it more than anything else."

"Added, seriously, as he held her close. Then, releasing her, he stamped across the room. "You know, Dale, that play's lousy. I know it, too. I'm not sap enough to believe in it now. But it has possibilities. I'll do another. As Devona says. A better one. By heavens, I will. And I'll make those damned critics eat every word they're rushing off to get printed right this minute. Won't I, darling?" Crossing to her again, he gave her chin a little shake, kissed the top of her nose lightly.

Smiling, she nodded. "Of course you will."

"And I'll pay you back, Dale—all your share of the estate that's gone up with this mess." Tal's face was flushed, eager.

Dale poured the bubbling champagne with a steady hand. "Forget that. It was a gamble I took with my eyes open. We lost. That's all."

"But next time we won't lose," Tal insisted. "With Devona beside me now—"

"Yes, With Devona—" Dale handed her a brimming glass—"you should really—get place."

"A toast, Dale." Tal prompted, lifting his glass. "You propose the first one."

Dale lifted his glass. "To my future sister-in-law—and may her every ambition be realized."

Bessemer Process For Making Steel Is Now Being Used

The necessities of the United States defense and the Lease-Lend programs have brought about a re-evaluation of the Bessemer process for making steel which was practically rendered obsolete by the Siemens-Martin open hearth system many years ago. And it is proving extremely valuable because it operates on pig-iron only, and produces steel sufficiently good for many purposes, in one-eighth the time taken by the more modern method.

Henry Bessemer was an Englishman, and invented many metal processes, but he owed his development of the process with which his name is identified to the interest of Napoleon III. Bessemer was set pondering the matter owing to the break down of so many guns in the Crimean war. He set about to improve the quality of artillery steel, but getting no co-operation from the British government he went to France where Napoleon gave him every assistance. The result was the invention of the converter process of making steel, and soon the world adopted it. In 1860, steel rails cost the equivalent of $600 a ton. Bessemer in six years brought it down to $200. His royalties brought him in more than $1,000,000 a year, and before he died the British government made amends by recommending Queen Victoria to make him a knight shortly before he died in London in 1898.

Since his day, however, the Bessemer process has been improved, and there are many kinds of work for which it is useful. It is estimated that existing facilities in the United States can produce 9,000,000 tons of Bessemer steel in a year, an increase of 2,600,000 tons. There is not only a valuable saving of time, but of money as well. Best of all, it eliminates a serious "bottleneck."

Choosing An Occupation

Says Sons Usually Follow In Footsteps Of Father

The old adage "like father, like son," was borne out by Ruth E. Eckert, associate professor of education at the University of Minnesota, at the annual University of Chicago conference on business education.

Citing recent studies indicating the close relationship between a boy's progress, both in and out of school, and the occupation of his father, Miss Eckert said:

"A study in Maryland disclosed that more than eight times as large a proportion of young people whose fathers were in the unskilled labor group left school and went to work before they were 16 years old as was the case with youth whose fathers were professional or technical workers."

The study also indicated that if a boy's father has a low income job the odds are three to one against the boy rising to a white collar level. Conversely, the study showed that the chances of falling from a white collar job to a lower income level are four to one.

Promises To Be Costly

German Economy Hard Hit By Their Invasion Of Russia

The invasion of the Soviet Union promises to be a costly affair for German economy, despite the official confidence of some Reich officials that German supplies can be increased by spoils from the captured districts, the United States Department of Commerce believes.

Not only is Germany being deprived of the raw materials, particularly food, feed and oil, which it received from Russia but the present campaign has greatly taxed European transportation facilities and oil stocks.

Despite the regimented nature of the German economic system, Berlin has recently found it necessary to introduce special control over the production of machine tools—a branch of industry in which Germany has heretofore claimed to possess superiority over its adversaries in the present war.—Washington Dispatch.

Recalling The Crimea
A Spot On The Map That Is Rich In British Traditions

"Crimes cut off by Nazi forces, London Hears." So runs a headline, and that eastern battle front by the same token suddenly grows more vivid. Crimea is a place name rich with associations for all English-speaking men. But Crimea—that sounds different. Our tribal kindred fought over all the Crimea less than a century ago, and they fought at the very noon of Victoria's day, one of the two great ages for men who speak English. The tight little Isle then was literally over-populated with great thinkers, great doers and, above all, great artists of the pen.

The Crimea—why, we still wear Lord Raglan's overcoat, invented for that campaign by the showoff general, and Florence Nightingale lives forever. Then there's "The Song of the Camp," which no one seems to remember by its title, but which everybody recalls when some singer starts off: "Give us a song, the soldiers cried!"

"The Charge of the Light Brigade"—well, the kiddies at school recited that for a full half century on Friday afternoons. And one great match of "dashless song" fired another by Kipling in one of his sombre and terrible moods—"The Last of the Light Brigade," in which the old color sergeant 40 years after says that Tennyson was almost right about the "march of hell," as "we are all right unto the workhouse."

For Victory

ORGANIZE BOYCOTT TO GAIN DEMANDS

At a largely attended mass meeting at Coleman on Sunday evening, somewhat drastic steps were decided upon to force employers of labor outside the mineworkers to recognize the union.

The meeting, presided over by E. Williams, mayor of Blairmore, was addressed briefly by Tom McCloy, organizer for the U. M. W. of A., who stated that gentle and direct warning had been given to these employers, which they had refused to heed, and the time had come to use harsher means. He stated he had organized unions among carpenters and store workers, hotel and restaurant employees and lumber workers. Many employers he said, had refused to recognize these unions, thus the boycott against these employers is being into effect. A resolution as follows was passed to be sent to each employer, worded: "That those employers who refuse to recognize the said unions after October 10th will be on open boycott by every member in The Pass." Another resolution passed urged upon the federal government to enact permanent legislation covering the right to organize, collective bargaining and protection against discrimination, and demanded that an enforcement board be set up with power to levy penalties on employers for violation of such legislation. It was also urged that the chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board, Dr. Victor Wright, be asked for his resignation, since it was felt that he had been unfair in his dealings with a number of cases which had come before the board.

WHEN AIN'T A DUCK A GOOSE, OR IS WHICH?

First, if it's a wild duck, why is it so extraordinarily big? Second, if it's a tame duck, why would the owner allow it to grow flight feathers? And thirdly, if it's a cross between a goose and a duck, why were there two of 'em? The other got away—Crossfield Chronicle.

NEWS FROM EDMONTON

(T. R. Windsor)

Edmonton, Oct. 6. — What is the reason behind the fact that when all the great statesmen of the world—that is, of the democratic world—are looking for ways and means of financing their countries and of carrying on the economic side of the world's greatest war, William Aberhart has not been sent for?

That is a question that should be answered in Alberta for many reasons. Why are all these great statesmen—President Roosevelt, Winston Churchill, Lord Beaverbrook, W. L. Mackenzie King and the Soviet leader Stalin—floundering around in apparent ignorance of the way out of this mess, when here in Edmonton, capital of the western province of Alberta, there lives a prophet and economist who holds the keys of wisdom and can open the door of every problem, political, economic, religious and social? Why?

Has the great prophet's name not been heard in those far-off lands down by the Atlantic and across the European Steppes? Is it possible that the name of William Aberhart, the discoverer of a sure panacea for economic ills, has not been sufficiently heralded forth to the world for these lesser or minor prophets to have heard it? Would they not have sent for the wise man from Seaford, Ontario, or this to set their feet upon a sure way if they had heard about his miracles? What is the reason for this situation so disastrous to the success of the allied cause and of the cause of plenty amid poverty?

Did they not hear that once upon a time not many years ago the great Alberta solver of economic mysteries found his people in dire poverty? They were eating gopher stew and, like the men in Bible times who wanted to demonstrate against fate, they were wearing sackcloth (without ashes); "gunnysacks," the prophet called them. Have these foreign statesmen not heard how the Alberta miracle man held the country in 1938 about the dreadful suffering from poverty, so as to reveal how it could be done?

It seems strange that they haven't heard of this great and wise prophet who knows better and more than anybody else of how to do it. It seems stranger still if they have heard of the Alberta miracle worker, William Aberhart, and of his cures for the ills that economic and political humanity's heir to, that they haven't sent for him, or at least haven't themselves, wearing suitable garments of humility, come down to the waters of Jordan in Edmonton, and dipped seven times—the mystic number—so that the scales of their ignorance and the sin of their foolishness might be washed away in the strong tide of faith in Aberhart! What's the reason behind the facts?

If the Alberta Miracle Man, who only needs a fountain pen to pay off millions of dollars of debt, and whose chief acolyte and understudy said once "the banks can write a cheque for $2,000,000 without costing them a cent,"—if this great Baba from the Mountains of Mystery has a really good and workable economic plan or system, why has he not been sent for by the great little statesmen—little in comparison with himself—so that he could show them how? Just why?

If these other propounders of systems think William Aberhart has not got the goods, that he can't solve the problem of plenty amid poverty, they should pay a visit to his capital city and there see how he has contrived that while his poor people are eating "gopher stew, wearing gunnysacks and living in hovels not fit for humans," he has raised himself to a stage of luxury and a standard of living that equals that of the notorious Fifty Big Shots of St. James Street, Montreal, who have so much suffering and poverty to account for some day! Sure, he can solve the problem! They'd certainly be convinced that it can be done if they visited the Calgary Prophet in his suite at the best hotel in Northern Alberta.

To finance the world's greatest con-

list would be a mere before breakfast chore for a man like Aberhart. What is needed is not tanks and more tanks, airplanes and more airplanes, food and more food, ships and more ships. No. That's nonsense. What is needed is a fountain pen in the hands of a prophet like the one dwelling in Alberta. With that, such a man could write cheques to pay for all these requisites and it would not cost anything!

What's the reason why the world's statesmen haven't sent for Aberhart to help them out of their difficulties? The reason is the same that caused them to turn away and forget the originator of the economic bug that Aberhart seized upon to place himself in the plenty he now enjoys amid poverty. (They haven't sent for Major Douglas either). What a set of pliers these great statesmen must be!

The reason is that Aberhart, despite his loud talk, hasn't got a workable solution for the country's economic difficulties. If he had, the world would have been making a beaten path to his door long ago.

BLIND NEWS VENDORS HELP SOLDIERS READ

The blind news vendors who operate street stands in association with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Toronto, permit their stands to be used for the reception of books, magazines and playing cards for the use of Canada's soldiers, sailors and airmen. The scheme is operated under the authority of the Auxiliary War Services. The first report made to the War Auxiliary Services, after the plan had been in effect for eleven days, showed that eleven hundred and eighty-six magazines, and paper-bound books, eighty-eight board-covered books and ninety-nine packs of cards had been turned in by the public.

WARTIME RAILWAY SERVICE

"Railways have a big job at any time and their work becomes a greatly multiplied importance in wartime when transportation is an even more vital factor in the life of a nation," says R. C. Vaughan, president of the system; in a message to readers of the Canadian National Magazine. "That applies not alone to those railways directly within the zone of warfare, but equally so to those lines far distant from the British Isles and other spheres in which British and allied forces are actively engaged. Canadian rails are as essential to the cause as those in England, Scotland and Wales, which have been under direct and damaging attack from the air."

"Canadian railways are carrying men and munitions needed for the actual front line, and are important in the lines of communications. In this total war, the lines of communications are numerous and far-flung and have guided Canadians to places unthought of two years ago as manœuvre ground for the armed forces of the Dominion—Spitzbergen, Iceland, Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, the West Indies and elsewhere—and it is highly probable that that list will be greatly lengthened. For those Canadians who consider that security lies in the distance of this country from the original scene of conflict that increasing area of activity merits their serious thought."

A Canadian soldier in England, who suffered concussion of the brain during a severe air raid, woke up in a hospital cot to find a Cockney nurse bending over him. "Where am I? Did they bring me in here to die?" asked the Canuck. "No, yersterlie," replied the nurse.

WE CAN'T QUIT

Almost everyone has been taking part in the press campaign for War Savings and War Loan has at one time or another become just a trifle weary by the need to play the same record over and over again—sacrifice, save and lend.

Every once in a while, however, it becomes necessary to remind ourselves that in any war, satisfaction or pleasure or glory come only when the war is over and victory has been achieved. Out of the waging of war, whether a man's task takes him into the thick of battle or into the tedious work of keeping the military forces well equipped, we may expect nothing but blood, toil, sweat and tears.

As the almanac comes from one battle in the skies only to get ready for another and another, so must those of us in this type of war work prepare to spread the country's appeal again and again until the appeal is no longer necessary.

And we at home have much less of an excuse for weariness than those of us who face constantly the threat of death or disablement.—Ex.

A free people must INVEST in its own FREEDOM

A Message FROM THE WAR SAVINGS COMMITTEE, OTTAWA

The people of Canada are the most fortunate in the world.

Fortunate in the great sweep of space that is ours from ocean to ocean.

Fortunate in the vast yield and immense resources of our forests, fields and mines.

Fortunate, too, in our democratic institutions.

In a word, fortunate in our freedom.

This freedom is threatened today as it has never been threatened before.

The fall of the British Empire would mean complete dislocation of our unfettered way of life.

Everyone wants this way of life defended—this freedom saved—for our own future and for posterity. The response to every appeal for our defence has been magnificent—heartening to the whole Empire—alarming to Hitler.

But the need for weapons of war grows ever more urgent, as the Nazi threat spreads wider over the world.

Three Simple Regular Methods of Saving

BANK PLEDGE PLAN—Convenient for business men and women, and others not on a payroll. Simply sign a War Savings Bank Pledge and give it to your bank. The bank will make monthly deductions from your account.

WAR SAVINGS STAMPS—A handy installment plan. Stamp folders may be obtained from Post Offices, Banks and many retail outlets. 16 stamps will buy one $4 Certificate, worth $5 at maturity.

RURAL SAVINGS PLAN—Farmers receiving regular payments from marketing outlets can authorize regular deductions of any amount from their cheques. If delivering grain to an elevator, authorize it to issue a cash ticket in the largest possible multiple of $4 in favor of The Receiver General of Canada, for the purchase of War Savings Certificates, to be registered in your name and mailed you direct.

SUPPORT THE WAR WEAPONS DRIVE IN YOUR COMMUNITY

Every town and city in Canada will soon conduct a War Weapons Drive. You will be asked to put all your own and your community's weapons in the drive. Canada must provide more planes, more ships, more tanks, more guns, more shells. If you are already buying War Savings Certificates, more save your pledge. If you are not, get your dollars working for Victory.

NO. 2—EVERYONE'S PROBLEM

Every Canadian has a farm problem. "My farm problem!" the town Canadian asks. "Yes, your farm problem!" You may not know farming. You may not know how to milk a cow or harness a horse. You may think that a double-tree is a lawn shrub. But you have a farm problem nevertheless.

You add your family need food. Your armed forces need food. Your British kin need food. The world needs food. Food will buy and keep the peace in the end. Your farm problem is the need for food.

How can town people deal with the farm problem? They can deal with it by understanding it—by aiding all those who are working toward the solution of it.

There was a time in Canada when there was no economic farm problem like that of today. Before the first Great War there was a good balance between urban and rural life in Canada. It was a time of easy understanding and good understanding. Cities and towns were relatively small. Every Canadian knew and understood urban life and farm life.

It was a time when people chose to live on farms or in towns because of their personal tastes. The same amount of money and equal industry and skill would produce similar returns in the town and on the farm.

It was not a time when city people got two or three times as much for their work and for their capital as they do in cities today. While the ten-hour day has changed to the eight-hour day, and the sixty-hour week has changed to the forty-eight or forty, or the thirty-six hour week in cities, the twelve to sixteen-hour day and the seven-day week remained in full effect on the farm the year round.

Then why do people stay on farms? The answer is that they don't and they won't when work is available in the cities as it is now. The young people leave the farms when they can lead an easier, better-paid life in the city. A food supply problem that has been acute since early summer is the lack of farm help. Every day appeals were issued for more help to save the crops. Thousands of town young people across Canada have learned something of the farm problem at first hand by doing farm work in their holidays.

This casual labor has been of great value to the war effort and the farmers are grateful for every hour of the work done, but farm production cannot be maintained with casual or unskilled labor. It must be worth while for farm boys and girls and skilled farm workers to stay on the farms and produce food if we are to keep production abreast of need.

The cost-of-living bonus which is being paid by order of the government to industrial workers is based on the highest wages paid from 1926-1940. Thus urban workers are receiving the highest wage rates ever paid to them and with full time employment and much overtime their pay envelopes are fatter than they have ever been before.

No such condition exists for farmers. The highest urban wages have increased the cost of what farmers buy and, despite increases in the prices of food, farmers are still receiving less net income than they received in 1926-1929.

The immediate food supply problem is to restore the balance between urban and farm incomes.

Thirteen divorces were granted by the supreme court in Calgary on Monday.

Selection boards to deal with officer appointments are being set in all parts of Canada.

Each member of the Yankees team will receive $5,917 from the world series, while the Dodgers' share will be $4,800 each.

Annie L. Walker, of Coleman, has been granted a divorce absolute from her husband, Charles Warren Walker, of Edmonton.

Alberta civil servants spent $365,872 on travelling expenses in the fiscal year ended March 31 last. Just the Big Shots, of course.

Miss Janet Munro, of Somerville, N.S., 81 years of age, has knitted 101 sweaters for the bombed out English children in less than thirteen months.

James Cousens, of Bellevue, journeyed to Calgary the early part of the week to attend the funeral of A. R. Ballentine, L. O. O. F. grand secretary.

Frank Barringham left Coleman during the week end for Vancouver, where he will be in future reside. Prior to his departure he was feted by the Elks' lodge.

A magazine advertisement reads: "Wanted, man, not more than thirty years of age, experienced, knockabout, slightly educated. Must be a bachelor." Well, we have lots of them nowadays.

Rev. Dr. Warwick Kelloway, for the past five years pastor of Knox United Church, Calgary, is taking a ministerial position in New York City. He and Mrs. Kelloway left Calgary Wednesday.

Now that a move is being made to unionize employees and to boycott employers, wouldn't it be a better idea to instill into the minds of many a person the reasonableness of paying their store bills?

Members of the crew of a Canadian National Railway train have subscribed $9.56 to aid bomb victims in Britain. That simply represents a cent for every time they cussed with in a week. "Boy, to help our war funds, let's do more cussin'" says Jim.

At the regular meeting of the Blairmore Lodge of Elks on Tuesday night, a number of applications for membership were favorably considered. Initiation will take place at the next regular meeting on October 21st, which meeting will be followed by a social hour with refreshments.

Announcement is made that gasoline stations may open after 7 p.m. and on week ends to sell gasoline to taxi-cab operators and drivers of other commercial vehicles. It can not, however, be sold to private car owners. Owners of private pumps are also permitted to service their commercial vehicles at any time of the day or night. Sales of gasoline directly by the oil distributor to the consumer are forbidden under another new regulation.

A most unbelievable story was in circulation through The Pass on Wednesday morning, to the effect that Alberta's premier-attorney general-minister of education was here. How "could he get here?" was the question. He wouldn't come by air, or train, or bus—it cost too much. And he surely wouldn't venture to travel that far—a king piece of highway between Fincher and Bellevue with his beautiful limousine! But, such is the way of the world today. As Able himself says: "One half you hear should not be believed." But there are Highway rats in Southern Alberta just craving to accommodate that same limousine.

Coleman Intermediate Hockey Club has been re-organized for the season, with the following officers: A. F. Short, hon. president; L. S. Richards, president; E. Leier, vice-president; R. Spillers, secretary; Jimmy Joyce, coach. It is hoped to form a league comprising Coleman, Blairmore and Bellevue.

The make-up of the Inter-Provincial Hockey League including Alberta and East Kootenay, has been definitely set at five clubs, Red Deer, Buffalo, Calgary, Stampeder, Lethbridge. Maple Leafs, Kimberley Dynamiters and Trail Smoke Eaters. The season will open on November 19 and the schedule to close at the end of February.

The following item is clipped from the October issue of the Canadian Mineworker: "Members of the United Mineworkers of America, District 18, all of whom are subscribers to the Canadian Mineworker, can make it difficult for advertisers to refuse to use these columns to present their selling message. The manufacturers who make, and the merchants who sell the products used by miners, would be greatly influenced by an intimation from you that you would appreciate seeing their advertisement in your magazine. And those who are already advertising will be influenced to continue if you demand their products and take nothing else. That is the past you can play in making the publication a success."

SHEET GLASS NOW MADE IN CANADA

When the German hammer smashed at the Lowlands, the glass industry—like many others—became a refugee. The glassmakers sailed to Canada, bringing with them their ancient heritage, and European skill was wedded to the Dominion's resources to create a new industry in this country. Early this summer the only glass factory in the Dominion at present producing window and heavy drawn glass in sheet form was opened by the Industrial Glass Works Company Limited in the town of St. Laurent on the outskirts of Montreal.

The actual process of manufacturing glass is as strange and wonderful as any tale of medieval alchemists searching for gold in bubbling cauldrons. A group of raw materials, such as silica sand, salt cake, soda ash, limestone and cullet (broken or waste glass), is transformed from a molten mass into a thin, transparent sheet which withstands the corrosive effects of the elements and at the same time permits the passage of light. Patient research and chemical analysis in the control of processes and raw materials have made possible the mass production of modern window glass, virtually free from flaws and distortion, according to an article by Vic Baker in the September issue of the C-I-L Oval.

In view of the fact that before the war Canada imported more than seventy per cent of its window glass from Belgium, the transfer of this industry is a distinct gain for Canadian industry as a whole. Two hundred Canadian workers—all trained in the past few months by skilled Belgian craftsmen—will contribute much in their production output to the war-time domestic needs of Canadian trade in general.

TRUTH WILL OUT

I, Adolf Hitler, on this my deathbed, am suffering bravely great pain. I wish to make it known to all that I'm not as the ancient King Herod was a murderer of women and children. I have no sympathy for the Poles, who have fought and lost a useless war. I've worked in the interests of, and not against humanity. I have used my people for the welfare of the Fatherland—not for my own ends. I've proven myself a true leader and found Joseph Stalin to be a madman, and thief, and a liar. I am amused at the Polish Nation, who underestimated the courage of the brave German soldiers. I also laugh at the British and French peoples, who endeavored to resist the Germans, who fought so valiantly and were unfraid. I feel myself slipping away slowly. I now bid you my last farewell, I am still of the opinion that the French are going to Hell, where the British will follow. Heaven's in sight, where my people sent me.

Another Enemy

With King Winter on the threshold and the season of greatest fire hazards approaching now is the time to give serious thought to the evil consequences of carelessness in the handling of one of the most beneficial and at the same time one of the most dangerous of the elements essential to civilized life.

It requires very little reflection to appreciate the beneficence which fire has bestowed upon mankind and there is no necessity here to enumerate its advantages or to speculate upon what civilization would be without it. But there is good cause to reflect upon the evils which it can, and unfortunately, too often does, bring in its train due to human frailty in the form of ignorance or negligence.

Every year millions of dollars go up in smoke to the great goddres, on this continent. Last year, property having an estimated value of $300,000,000 was destroyed by uncontrolled fire in the United States. Proportionately the property loss in Canada from the same cause was comparable and Western Canada contributed her share to this unnecessary sacrifice.

It would be bad enough if only property were immolated on this sacrificial altar, but it does not end here. Valuable lives are being lost every year as carelessness with fire takes toll of human as well as material resources.

The term "unnecessary sacrifice" has been used in reviewing these losses. That the phrase is justifiable is readily demonstrated when one analyzes the figures released by government agencies and takes note of the causes responsible for this terrible waste.

The Big Five

Public enemy No. 1 in the prairie provinces in 1940 was carelessness in handling smoking materials—tobacco, cigarettes and cigars and for a number of years the careless smoker has headed the list as the responsible agent for heaviest fire loss in the Canadian west. Defective stoves and furnaces rank next in the black list, while playing with matches, overheated chimneys and pipes and careless handling of petroleum products follow in sequence of their evil import.

One has only to scan the list of the big five to discern that there is amply warranty for declaring that carelessness and ignorance are the root cause of this needless waste and sacrifice and to state unhesitatingly that practically all of it could have been avoided with the exercise of a little commonsense, care and forethought.

While the careless smoker is a menace the year round, and possibly this is the reason that he heads the list, some of the other hazards listed as primary causes of uncontrolled fire are amplified many fold during the winter season just at hand, and especially is this true of defective stoves and furnaces and overheated chimneys and pipes. Possibly the careless handling of petroleum products may be listed as an acute winter hazard when one remembers how often, far too often, a sluggish fire in the kitchen stove is prodded into action by a dash of coal oil and even the still more dangerous gasoline.

Because of these increased dangers during the winter months now is the time for the occupant of every farm and every home in hamlet, village and town to check over furnaces, stoves and pipes, repair all defects and to make a solemn resolution to eschew the use of coal oil or gasoline to speed up a recalcitrant fire.

More Important In War

These are important precautions to take not only in winter but throughout the year. They are important measures in peace time, but in war time their importance is multiplied many times over. At a time when the nation is conserving, and must conserve, all its assets in manpower and materials to wage a desperate war against the forces of evil, every life lost by fire, every dollar that goes up in smoke is an aid to the brutal Hitler and his Nazi hordes. Let it not be forgotten that loss of life and property are of tangible assistance to the enemy.

For this reason, if for no other, efforts to prevent loss by fire should be redoubled and no alone should be left unturned to make loss from this cause impossible. As already indicated, the risk is much greater during the next few months than in the summer and is greater while we are at war than in times of peace, even after discounting sabotage possibilities.

In the small towns and villages, much of the fire fighting equipment is manned by voluntary forces. Enlistments in the army, the navy and the air force have necessarily impaired the experienced personnel available to quench a conflagration. Hence, because of the war, danger from fire has been increased and it behooves those who have not fared forth in uniform to take every precaution to prevent a fire breaking out and to be prepared to adequately cope with fire if someone is careless enough to let it break out.

Plans For Post-War Emigration

Very Heavy Influx From Britain To Canada Is Foreseen

Officials of the British Dominions Emigration Society announce that they are already laying plans for a mass wave of emigration from Britain to Canada immediately after the war.

Founded some 60 years ago as a philanthropic organization, the first purpose of the British Dominions Emigration Society was to assist settlers in Canada to reunite with their families. Though its activities have necessarily had to be suspended since the outbreak of war, it is fully expected that larger numbers than ever before will apply for passage assistance immediately after the cessation of hostilities.

It is realized that one of Canada's immediate needs after the war will be immigration from the British Isles. Many adventurous spirits will first strike out alone, leaving their families temporarily in Britain, and the Emigration Society expects many calls to be made upon it to assist wives and children to join their husbands and fathers. This is the particular purpose for which the organization was originally founded and the Society is now laying its plans to see that that necessary assistance will be forthcoming in as many cases as possible.

Apart from the various privations and dangers that were faced by the settlers of two and three generations ago, one of their major difficulties was to establish themselves, build their new homes, support their families in England and, at the same time, save sufficient money to bring their families to the new land. The British Dominions Emigration Society was formed by a group of charitably minded citizens to assist in the reunion of these families by advancing loans without interest charges. More than 40,000 families have been assisted and hundreds of thousands of people now in Canada owe their presence in the work of this organization.

Its activities have stirred the warm commendation of many British and Canadian Government officials and, most recently, for the continuance of its work and the promise of further assistance to future immigrants, the earnest congratulations of the Canadian Premier, the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King.

The head office of the society is in London, England, and the Canadian manager is R. Gordon Burgoyne, whose office is located in Montreal.

Airman Had Good Reason For Wanting To Look Trim

The young airman came into the Y.M.C.A. at London's Waterloo station. It was early in the morning. He had just stepped off the train after an obvious long journey. His uniform was crumpled from his having slept in it. His face bore a worried look.

"Anything wrong?" asked the "Y" man in charge.

The airman nodded. "I've an appointment this morning," he said mournfully, "and just look at this uniform."

"It's pretty bad," the "Y" man agreed.

"I suppose there's no place open this early where I can get a job of pressing done?"

There was no place, the other knew. He thought for a moment.

"No. But I think I may be able to borrow an iron. That be any good?"

The airman's face lit up.

"Could you really?" he asked incredulously.

The "Y" man could and did. Out came the airman's uniform and he retired, while the other plied the iron.

The job finished, the flyer donned the uniform and gazed admiringly at its smooth perfection. He shook his head in wonderment.

"Gee, thanks!" he said. "This is fine. I was awfully worried about the way I looked."

His voice grew confidential.

"You see, I've got to go to Buckingham palace this morning and a chap likes to look his best when he's being given a medal by the King. Thanks awfully."

Ban On Swiss Trade

Britain Can No Longer Continue To Permit Passage Of Material

The British ministry of economic warfare announced Britain no longer could continue the limited facilities which heretofore have accorded passage of material for Switzerland's industry through the sea blockade and across enemy territory.

A statement said the action was taken because of the terms of a recent commercial agreement between Switzerland and Germany.

It said the British government appreciated the difficulties of the position of Switzerland, a land-locked neutral, and would continue to give facilities within limits for imports for foodstuffs and other goods for strictly domestic consumption.

New Radio Device

Test Machine For Detecting And Intercepting Enemy Aircraft

Guarded as a military secret, the United States army's new radio device for determining and intercepting enemy aircraft is completing its first comprehensive test.

Brig.-Gen. C. H. Wash, commander of the 2nd Interceptor Command of Seattle, explained its general method of operation.

"Automatic" devices, operating without human attention, automatically feed to the stations behind the lines information on movement of aircraft which enables skilled operators on filter boards to plot their courses," he said.

"Automatic" devices do not discriminate between friendly and hostile aircraft; filter board operators must do this in a few seconds from their knowledge of the position and movements of friendly airplanes. Hostile tracks are transmitted immediately to an officer who with the instruments—also secret—can determine almost instantaneously the time and place at which his own army's fighter craft can intercept the opponents. He forwards corresponding orders to fighter plane commands."

General Wash, who spent six weeks in Britain early this year as an aviation observer, said the equipment being tested now is American-made and is the first to receive a tryout in the U.S. under conditions simulating actual warfare.

Needs Victory Badly

Hitler Knows It Is Necessary To Boost German Morale

Hitler needs a resounding victory for home consumption, Major-Gen. F. G. Beaumont-Newhall, attached to the British Purchasing Commission in Washington, said in an interview at the headquarters of the British Information Service, 30 Rockefeller Plaza.

"But he is not getting that victory," he added. "What he really needs is to give the German people a nip before another winter sets in. The morale of the German people is a definite factor in this war. That morale is very brittle. Do not misunderstand me. I do not say that the morale is breaking. It is a long way from that. But it is more vulnerable now than ever before."

Asked about the possibility of a British expeditionary force to Russia, the General said: "There is a possibility. That is my personal opinion. But there is the question of maintenance. That question is more vital than the question of men only."—New York Sun.

Using Glass-Like Plastic

Dentists are finding use for acrylate, the glass-like plastic which the Royal Air Force uses for the windows and gun turrets of its aircraft, Dr. E. H. Increase Should Be Slight

An increase in farm prices should not make a great increase in the cost of living for city consumers, according to W. E. Harkin, secretary of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. On a general average 80 cents of a consumer's dollar is spent in profits, wholesale and retail expenses and only 20 cents reaches the farmer.

Gives Jumper Confidence

Invention Of Anti-Spin Parachute

A new parachute which will prevent parachute troops from spinning dizzily through the air was announced in a symposium on aviation medicine at the University of Chicago's 50th anniversary celebration.

Dr. Andrew C. Ivy of Northwestern University, Chicago, and Dr. Anton J. Carlson of the University of Chicago, declared the new parachute with a small anti-spin "air anchor" has been found to give the jumper a feeling of confidence, particularly in delayed falls because he floats in an erect or partly-erect position and does not whirl.

QUESTION OF A BRITISH OFFENSIVE IS DEBATABLE

London.—The House of Commons will debate—probably in secret—whether Britain can continue to co-script her own manpower for an eventual continental offensive and still turn out the armaments which both she and her allies need, Prime Minister Churchill disclosed.

There are unconfirmed reports that the government will form no more all-British divisions on home soil. Some persons who are well-informed contend the limit already has been reached in pulling men from the vital fields of war industry, mining and agriculture to serve in the armed forces.

Mr. Churchill told the house the problem of distribution of manpower is a "direct and central part of the war effort" and that the debate, therefore, probably would not be public lest the information developed aid the Germans.

Among the political developments was a meeting of the Conservative party which approved unanimously a vote of confidence in the Churchill government based on the prime minister's decision "to welcome the Russian nation as an ally in the struggle against aggressive barbarism, and to fortify their resistance by every possible means."

Sir Cuthbert Headlam, Conservative, in making the motion, said: "We should be very foolish if we did not realize that at present our interests and those of Russia are identical."

In connection with the manpower problem, Mr. Churchill has disclosed that the question of invading the continent has been weighed seriously by the government.

Actually, a growing feeling that Britain is near the limit of her manpower resources, except that which comes from the Empire, has been responsible for a measurable dwindling of the public clamor for an immediate invasion of the continent in order to ease German pressure on Russia.

There appears to be growing acceptance of the idea, such a land offensive must be deferred one year, possibly two. Thus, instead of invasion talk there is growing emphasis on the devotion of all efforts to providing arms and munitions for Russia's millions of men.

Must Join Forces

United States-British Union To Ensure Peace Urged By Knox

Indianapolis.—U.S. secretary of the navy, Frank Knox, proposed that the United States and Britain join forces "for 100 years at least," to produce "by force if need be" an effective system of international law.

He told the convention of the American Bar Association that to prevent another world war the seven seas must be controlled for many years to come by the great "peace-minded, justice-loving" powers—Britain and the United States—which are "lacking in any desire for selfish aggrandizement."

"To put it bluntly," he said, "we must join our force, our power, to that of Great Britain, another great peace-loving nation, to stop new aggression, which might lead to a world disturbance, at its beginning."

The United States must give up the "famous folly" that it will not fight unless invaded.

There will not be for many years a time when we may not have to fight—"let us determine that we will fight elsewhere than on our own soil; far better a distant war than one at home."

Royal Air Force

Has Destroyed 658 German Fighter Planes Since February

Middlesbrough, Eng.—Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair told a Middlesbrough audience that since last Feb. 1 the Royal Air Force had destroyed 658 German fighter planes, during offensive operations over enemy territory and had itself lost 428 planes and 374 pilots. The minister said R.A.F. sorties over northwest France were planning down large forces of German fighters which otherwise would be thrown against Russia.

Guest Children Like Canada

Edmonton.—Nearly 50 per cent. of the British guest children in Canada have decided they want to spend the rest of their lives in the Dominion. Mrs. T. M. Snow of Ottawa, only English representative on the children's overseas reception board, said in an interview here.

A Strong Base

Vast Supplies Of Equipment And Materials At Iceland
Reykjavik, Iceland.—A field force of the United States Army—infantry, artillery, and engineer, signal, ordnance and medical units—has arrived here with vast supplies of equipment and materials to make this one of the most formidable bases of the north.

The Americans brought with them, Maj.-Gen. Charles H. Bonesteel, called "some interesting equipment"—skis, snowshoes and Garand automatic rifles for every man.—to take over camps, built by the U.S. marines and British forces.

Maj.-Gen. H. O. Curtis, commander-in-chief of the British forces and general officer commanding the British troops on the island, continues in command of all soldiers, including the American contingent.

(The arrival of American naval and marine forces in Iceland was announced on July 7, although American officers were seen there as early as mid-May. U.S. army air corps units also are on the islands. On Sept. 25, the arrival in Reykjavik of U.S. army nurses was disclosed.)

British Tommies off duty soon were in the best of terms with the Americans. These new troops appear to have supplies enough to ignore the rough Icelandic winter.

The vast equipment should turn the island into a Gibraltar of the north.

Indians More Prosperous

Good Fish Catch And Strong Fur Market Are Factors

Ottawa.—The 120,000 Indians of Canada, who have tasted the lean times of depression are enjoying a better measure of prosperity than for several years. Indian affairs department officials said.

Dr. H. W. McGill, director of the branch who has just returned from the western tour, said that among factors assisting the Indians' economic position was a good fish catch on the Pacific coast and the existing strong fur market with fair supplies of fur-bearing animals in territories where Indians hunt.

Information available to the branch indicated "several hundred" Indians have joined the fighting forces, following in the footsteps of tribesmen who gave good service in the Canadian army during the First Great War.

Speeding The Mail

To Establish Airgraph System Between Canada And Britain

Ottawa.—Postmaster General Mulock says arrangements are under way to institute an airgraph system between Canada and Great Britain. The airgraph system is the scheme whereby the sender writes his message on a special form which is photographed on a miniature film. This is airmailed across to Britain where it is enlarged and delivered. The plan is for communications between Canadians and troops overseas, and is similar to the present scheme used between Britain and troops in the Near East. The rate would be 10 cents a word.

Praise For Workers

Lord Beaverbrook Pleased With Tank Production For Russia

London.—Lord Beaverbrook, minister of production, sent from Moscow a telegram of congratulation to all workers who took part in the "Tanks for Russia" week, which set a production record.

The message read: "Boys, oh boys, you've raised the roof and lifted the lid and beaten the band. Now let's show them we can do the same and better for a 'Tanks for Britain' week."

Large Order Placed

Canada Will Soon Produce Fighter Planes Equipped With Engines

Toronto.—Canada's first fighter plane to be equipped with an engine before being sent overseas will shortly be in production here. The plane, manufactured by the De Havilland Aircraft Co., will be powered by a Rolls-Royce engine manufactured at the company's Detroit plant.

The new plane will be known as the "Mosquito," and a large order has been given the company.

More New Cars

Ottawa.—In spite of new taxation and gasoline restrictions, sales of new motor vehicles in August increased 45 per cent. in number compared with the same month last year, the Dominion bureau of statistics said.

RUSSIA TO HAVE ALL NECESSARY WAR SUPPLIES

Moscow.—Great Britain and the United States agreed to all practically all Soviet needs for war supplies in exchange for Russian raw materials at the concluding session of a momentous three-power conference that ended two days ahead of schedule.

It was probably the shortest international council of such dimensions ever held, having lasted only three days. A joint statement issued by the British and American delegations and a Soviet communiqué told its results, in general terms.

For Great Britain and the United States Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's minister of supply, and W. Averell Harriman, President Roosevelt's envoy, promised.

"To place at the disposal of the Soviet government practically every requirement for which the Soviet large quantities of raw materials urgently required in those countries."

Arrangements were made to "increase the volume of traffic in all directions," it added.

The joint Anglo-American statement declared that Premier Stalin "expresses his thanks to the United States and Great Britain for their bountiful supplies of raw materials, machine tools and munitions of war, and acknowledged 'the ample supply of Russian raw materials from the Soviet government'."

The statement ended: "In concluding its session the conference adheres to the resolution of the three governments that after the final annihilation of Nazi tyranny, a

CANADIAN BROTHERS PROUD OF POTTING NAZI "EGG-LAYER"

These boys are the envy of the rest of the Canadian troops in Britain. Through force of circumstances, most of the others haven't yet been in contact with the Nazis but the members of this anti-aircraft section training in England have shot down a Nazi plane, and are they happy! These two are brothers, E.A. Underwood (left) and L.H. Underwood, who were landscape gardener and sawmill worker, respectively in Victoria, B.C. before they joined the army.

Air Commodore A. C. Critchley, C.G.M., D.S.O., Canadian-born director of initial training for the Royal Air Force in England, arrived recently at Toronto on a tour of No. 1 Air Training Command.

Peace will be established which will enable the whole world to live in security in its own territory in conditions free from fear or need."

The Soviet communiqué stressed the "atmosphere of perfect mutual understanding, confidence and good will" and said the delegates were "inspired by the eminence of the cause of delivering other nations from the Nazi threat of enslavement."

Stalin, it said, "took an active part" in the conference which "manifested perfect unanimity and close co-operation of the three great powers in their common efforts to gain a victory over the mortal enemy of all freedom-loving nations."

The Russian communiqué did not specifically mention the agreement for exchange of weapons and raw materials.

Beggars on the streets of New York City make $15,000,000 annually, according to estimates.

Munitions For Middle East

United States War Supplies Are Pouring Into Cairo

Cairo.—United States war supplies are pouring into the Middle East in such volume they are seriously straining unloading facilities of Egypt's ports.

Ships are bulging with planes, tanks, material and general merchandise, discharging their cargoes amid feverish activity day and night.

More than a score of American ships already have arrived in this area with leave-land supplies.

These are in addition to British, Danish, Netherlands and other freighters coming in with troops and cargoes from Britain and all parts of the British Empire.

CUT OUTPUT OF ELECTRICAL GOODS BY ONE QUARTER

Ottawa.—Domestic production of radios, refrigerators, stoves, vacuum cleaners and electric washing machines has been reduced to 76 per cent. of 1940 output, the department of munitions and supply announced.

The curtailment order was sent to manufacturers by Alan H. Williamson, controller of supplies in the department, with approval of R. O. Baskerville, chairman of the war-time industries control board.

The preliminary reduction to 75 per cent. of 1940 output will result in the following estimated decreases in production: the department said: Radios, 125,000; electric washing machines, 25,000; electric refrigerators, 13,000; electric stoves, 7,700; gas stoves, 7,700; vacuum cleaners, 10,000.

The ordered reduction applies to all other types of stoves but officials said that no estimate of the decreases in other types is available.

The department described the ordered reduction a "stunning blow" at the production and sale of non-essential consumer goods in wartime.

"While the order is aimed at conserving steel, metals, and other materials urgently required for war purposes, it also curtails the trend toward increasing consumer purchasing in Canada, which cannot be allowed to interfere with war production," the department's statement said.

The statement said Munitions Minister Howe had warned manufacturers that "there can be no guarantee" that materials will be available for production of the regulated goods "even on the lower (production) basis."

"The output of merchandise essential to our war effort must come first," Mr. Howe said.

The announcement that production would be curtailed was made after the heavy consumer goods affected had been declared "supplies" under provisions of the Munitions and Supply Act, thereby bringing them under jurisdiction of Supplies Controller Williamson.

At the same time Mr. Williamson had issued order cutting production to 75 per cent. of 1940 output.

The departmental statement said Mr. Williamson plans to set up advisory committees in each of the industries affected.

"Thus the industries themselves will co-operate with the controller in the diversion of their output from civilian to war needs," it said.

MEASURES USED BY THE NAZIS TO PUT DOWN REVOLT

London.—Hangman and firing squad held sway in the writhing new Europe, as Germany stamped at an acknowledged "internal front" of revolt that stretched from Prague to Paris.

In former Czechoslovakia, in the angry remnants of Yugoslavia, in Greece, in France, and even in Bulgaria and Hungary, the story was the same, differing only as to scope and detail.

Admitting employment of the sternest possible measures, German sources asserted:

"We, Germany, herself deep in a fight for life, it is understandable that we cannot tolerate an internal front against us."

But Czech sources in London suggested the blood bath in old Czechoslovakia had a far more sinister meaning than mere suppression of revolt. They said it was a deliberate process of extermination of all intellectual Czech elements liable to offer opposition, preparatory to mass transfer of heavy German industries to comparatively bomb-free sectors behind the German mountains.

Such of the particulars of the unrest as trickled through the censorship files follow:

German execution squads shot more Czechs in both Prague and Brno, southern Czechoslovakia, on conviction by courts martial of high treason, economic sabotage and illegal possession of weapons, and the courts themselves ground out 39 new sentences of death.

D.N.B., the news and propaganda agency, said those executed included Jews. (The Prague radio, quoted by CBS in New York, said: "Fifteen Czechs have been shot, three Jews hanged and 110 Czechs handed over to the Gestapo.") Three accused persons were said to have been acquitted at Prague.

Total death sentences in the protectorate since an emergency was declared last Sunday now have reached 130 according to unofficial compilations on the basis of separate announcements through the German news and propaganda agency add other sources.

Some of the Czechs faced firing squads; others were hanged, the foreign correspondents' Digest Aus Deutschland said. Whether all the condemned have been executed was not stated.

May Evacuate Nationals

Canadians Still Left In Japan Are Mostly Missionaries

Ottawa.—The department of external affairs, reflecting reports of deterioration in Japanese-British relations, has revealed that Canada may very shortly evacuate more nationals from Japan.

Canadians still in Japan are mostly missionaries of both Catholic and Protestant faith.

Officials of the department say they hope to repatriate all who can be persuaded to leave aboard a vessel which Britain is understood to have dispatched to Nippon.

But on the balance there is no indication of a deterioration of Japanese-Canadian relations. Tokyo apparently accepted the trade rupture with the Dominion when Japanese credits were frozen.

Regardless Of Danger

London.—Seven hundred members of the Young Peoples Keep-Fit League petitioned the government to keep recreation centres open this winter regardless of the danger of night air bombings. "If we must die in an air raid," the petition said, "we prefer to die happily at a dance rather than perish miserably in a dugout."

For Scrap Metal

London.—The historic metal fences and gates surrounding Buckingham Palace are to be taken down to be converted into scrap for the manufacture of tanks and other weapons. The ministry of works and buildings said the king had approved the removal of about 20 tons of metal as a contribution toward a national campaign.
